

Croatia: TIE DAY, Oct 18th

- As strange as it may sound, Croatia has a National tie day. It's celebrated on October 18th.
- Tie is a national croatian accessory. Croatian souldiers wore it in wars and then it spreaded around the europe in 17th century.
- On that day , it's a work day so peopole don't get a day off on it, but it's still celebrated.
- Most of the peopole put on a tie. It's not much, but it means something to them because it reminds people of their history.
- In 2003 the artist Marijan Bušić put the biggest tie in the world around the Roman Amphitheatre in the City of Pula.
- It was red because that colour represents love. Couple of millions of people saw it.
